HELPING A HERO

Changing Lives, One Veteran at a Time

SSGT Matthew Lammers, US Army, Richmond TX (Recent Recipient, April 2010)

Lammers lost both legs and his left arm when his Humvee hit a buried IED explosive in Baghdad. Comrades saved his life, and now he'll lean on other comrades as he begins at least a year of rehabilitation at the Center for the Intrepid, a gleaming, glass-and-metal center that opened this year to treat grievously injured soldiers. It was Lammers' act of generosity that put him in that Humvee. Scheduled for a trip home, Lammers switched places to let another soldier go home for his first wedding anniversary.

Lammers and his men were returning to base in Baghdad when the Humvee drove over the explosive. He is now walking on 2 leg prosthetics and is adjusting to an arm prosthetic as well. In addition, he will have surgery to allow his brain to tell his prosthetic arm how to work.
